2007

2007 Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts

"College is the beginning of a journey, one of self exploration. We find ourselves as young adults and attempt to mold into future professionals. We are enriched both academically and socially, setting into motion what we will ultimately become -- productive individuals who will all make a contribution to better the world we live in."
- S. Greenberg, MCLA Student

MCLA Faculty/Staff

Dear Members of the Class of 2007:

I congratulate you on your graduation from Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts, and offer you best wishes in all your future endeavors. Earning a baccalaureate or master's degree is a significant accomplishment, of which you should be proud. Your MCLA degree will prove valuable, as you pursue careers or continue your education in graduate degree programs. It is my hope that you will fondly remember your time here at MCLA. As you have worked hard to complete your studies, you have developed relationships with members of the faculty, staff, and your fellow classmates. Many of these bonds will continue past graduation and serve you well both personally and professionally. Please keep us informed of your activities and accomplishments, as I know there will be many. As alumni, you will be our best examples of success and will serve as important role models for future students. MCLA is a better institution because of each and every one of you! I wish you every success and look forward to calling you fellow alumni. Please stay in touch, and visit us often.

Sincerely,
Mary K. Grant, Ph.D.

Keeping Busy

MCLA 2007

The best part about being involved is meeting and working with some amazing people. It was very easy to get involved. I love every minute of running from event to event and planning each activity because seeing so many happy faces after the event makes all the dedication and hard work worth it.
